Event Description:

Knight Foundation focuses on promoting informed and engaged communities. To that end, they strongly believe in the potential of the arts to engage residents, and bring a community together.

Hearing Handel, or seeing the tango in an unexpected place provides a deeply felt reminder of how the classics can enrich our lives. For those brief moments, people going along in their everyday lives are part of a shared, communal experience that makes their community a more vibrant place to live.

In these days of shrinking audiences, we also hope that these random acts will encourage people to attend traditional performances. We can't promise it. But it's hard to watch what unfolds during a Random Act of Culture ®, and not be inspired to see and hear more.

This Random Act of Culture (RAC) would start very simply, with a single string instrument or string quartet playing Ode to Joy on the center of the grassy area. Another small ensemble, a brass jazz quintet, would be strolling towards them playing the same tune until they come together. Once joined, they play it together in a classical-style arrangement and additional instruments join them. Then they repeat the piece, but this time in a jazz-style arrangement and additional musicians join them again. The ensemble continues to grow and expand with musicians and each time the piece is played, it is in a different style – classical, jazz, blues, Latin, Bossa Nova, gospel, reggae, African drum beats, hip hop, etc. If logistics permit, we would also like to include an electric guitar. The group will continue to grow with choral groups: gospel, opera, classical and children's choirs. And then finally, choreographed dancers will join – classical ballet, contemporary and Afro-Cuban/Haitian dancers until it is a massive ensemble is playing, singing and dancing together in a grand finale.

This concept will represent numerous disciplines of music and dance, while highlighting the culture and flavor that is unique to Miami. I
